Time Disappears; Homework, Jobs,

CATCHING-UP. Plopped by her phone, Sherri Foust discusses the day's vital gossip.

MOTHER'S HELPER. MHSers found no rest even at home as chores and babysitting occupied spare hours. Jo Ellen Smith spoons dinner to her new baby brother.

The clock moved too fast for us 2100 MHSers. Calendar pages, too, flipped with unbelievable speed. The responsible culprit was none other than our own busy-ness.

Being individuals with varied interests and talents, no two of us had identical schedules, but they were all undeniably complex. Jobs such as clerking in stores took a large time-bite from the days of a few of us, while others devoted many hours to photography, Y-Teen work, Candystriping, perfecting a basketball hook shot, or learning to play the guitar. Studying could not be ignored since homework probably occupied more time than any other single activity. Besides spending hours at our desks or the dining room table, we ran to the shopping center for gingham for clothing projects or to the library for research work. And our social lives demanded evenings for parties, games, movies, dances, the plays, or just "messaging around."

Countless times we wished we could stop the clock to cram in one more club meeting or assignment or dance, but the effort often failed: the day—and inevitably the year—was just too short.

LOFT LARKS. On Wednesday evenings many Mishawaka students rehearsed with their church choirs for Sunday morning services. On Sunday nights most local churches held youth group meetings with varied programs.

cores of School Activities Are Chief Thieves

NIGHT OWL. Coffee, No-Doz, and a source theme deadline kept students like Dave Wensits studying far into the night. Along with their daily assignments students read numerous books, gathered career information, composed themes, drew sketches for biology notebooks, and watched special television programs.

SUMMER PRACTICE. Not even locked gates could keep MHS cheerleaders from workouts. They scaled the Tupper Field fence at 6:30 a.m. for summer drills.

Spare Time Goes Out of Style When

ORIENTATION. Carole Boozer ushers freshmen to seats for a series of talks on MHS clubs, sports, publications, and traditions.

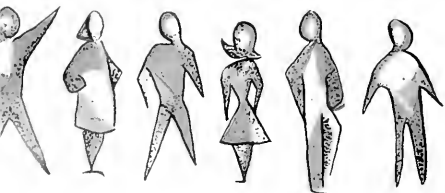

The flurry of purchasing season football tickets, shopping for shifts, textured stockings, and madras shirts and blouses, and worming our way in infinitely long lines to rent textbooks rudely dumped us from the leisure of summer into the hectic world of time schedules, classes, and homework.

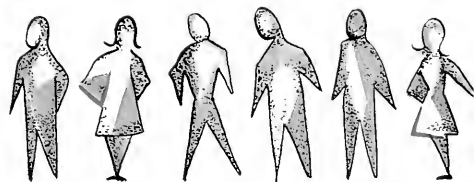

Oftentimes after spending the day at school and returning home for a quick supper, we hurried back to participate in extra-curricular activities. We practiced band routines, rehearsed for class plays, attended various club meetings, and cheered for our team at games. Returning home again, we tried to find time for a little homework and "Mr. Novak," "The Munsters," and "Bewitched."

We plagued counselors with varied problems—from shortening the school day for after-school jobs to cramming seven-hour schedules with band and orchestra, A Cappella Choir, developmental reading, office work, dance class, GAA, and four solids.

In September football players ran through tires on the practice field, cross country harriers trotted barefooted through the grass in Merrifield Park, tennis players slammed balls back and forth in practice matches on the courts, and tankers stumbled out of bed at 5:30 a.m. to swim laps. Along with these athletes we happily roasted by the raging bonfire at the Booster Club pep rally just before the start of school.

The first pep session of the year was highlighted by a visit from "LBJ", who was well protected by several armed secret-service agents. Boasting of a fine MHS football team, he called for a class-by-class vote, and our team was declared victorious even before we played the game with Gary Horace Mann. In the evening we yelled to "Fight Song" and "Charge" with the band, and our prophecy came true: we won.

COKE HOUR. Jane Jensen, who spent the summer in Lehrte, Germany, under the Americans Abroad Program, greets Lily Fernandez, AFS student from Guatemala.

School Starts in the Fall

WEENIE ROASTER. Mari Lancaster cooks frankfurters for Tim Callaway and Bill Bradbury at the annual Blackfriars' picnic in Battell Park. Many organizations had their first meetings outdoors in the warm fall weather.

SCHEDULE CHANGES. At the start of school, counselors were kept quite busy altering schedules. Margaret Hardisty asked Mr. Wukovits to add physics to her program.

Spanking Judge, Misko Staff, Hoot Group

CONCENTRATION. Occasionally students like Anna Dunkleberger, Kent Kemmerling, and Ted Spear do try to study at the library. However, during the busy hours between 6:30 and 8:30, it is difficult to find a vacant seat, let alone study.

SUBSCRIPTION ASSEMBLY. Cart-pushing janitor Dick LeMon was one of many colorful characters who appeared in the Miskodeed "Man-on-the-Street" skit.

October was chocked full of assembly programs. To kick off the Miskodeed subscription drive, the 1965 staff presented a "Man-on-the-Street" skit. A Caveman carrying a Miskodeed chiseled out of stone, a gangster who hoped to steal the entire 1750 copies of the Miskodeed because his mug shot was included, and the Beatles, who sang their famous "Yea, Yea, Yea," urged us to subscribe. In another program for the entire school, Judge William Obermiller, the "spanking judge" from Whiting, told us about teen-age crimes, pointing out the effects of drinking, careless driving, and fighting. We left the assembly impressed by the fact that seemingly innocent acts can have serious consequences. On the lighter side a few choir members brought laughter, singing, and clapping at a "Hootenanny" assembly. We enjoyed such songs as "All My Trials," "Scotch and Soda," "Banua," and "Today."

Sometimes our homework involved finding reference information so we moved operations to the public library. However, among friends we goofed off, wasting precious study hours. We primed for underclass pictures, practiced selections for Music Honor Society auditions, prepared our favorite dishes for Home Ec and Future Teachers Clubs' picnics, thought up ridiculous stunts for Commercial Club initiations, and then enjoyed a long-anticipated two-day vacation of sleeping 'til noon, watching television, and ignoring homework during teachers' convention.

Bring Variety to All-School Assemblies

CAVEMAN CUTIES. At an indoor pep session for football, Miss Guided (Dave Hunter), Miss Ima Bear (Frank Signorino), and Miss Maroon (Ken Deitchley) listen hopefully as Jamie McCoy announces the new Miss America

POOPED FINGERS. Mr. Edward Andros snapped 1589 smiling faces during the two days that underclass pictures were taken. Ron Holland poses for his shot.

AMUSING ANTIC. Since she had never been initiated, Maureen Canfield, vice-president of Commercial Club, had to chomp into a dangling apple for her stunt.

Slaving many long hours cutting crepe paper, painting letters, and assembling floats, we tried to make 1964 Homecoming the best ever. Because of popular demand the Student Council Coronation Ball, "Moonlight Masquerade," was held October 31, the Saturday night before the game, but only 160 students danced around a haunted house and graveyard to the lively music of the Lettermen. Ann Leyes, attired in a shocking pink brocade dress and escorted by Hi-Y president Dave Falkenau, reigned as Homecoming Queen.

Homecoming itself turned out to be a bigger success with its inspiring pep session and parade of 17 floats, topped off with a football victory that evening for MHS over Fort Wayne North. Several teachers entertained us with a skit at the pep session. We laughed at "rival coach" Mr. James Braunsdorf, physics teacher, as he appeared toting an oversized handkerchief and crying large fearful tears, begging his kidnappers not to hurt him. The band, vigorously playing the school song, led the parade, followed by the queen and her court riding in convertibles and then the 17 floats. History Club, whose slogan was "Sink the Redskins," devised a leaky canoe which squirted real water, much to the annoyance of anyone in its path; nevertheless, it won the prize for originality. Art Club won for beauty, and German Club for appropriateness of theme. Each club won an award of ten dollars.

Squirting Canoe, Coloring Book, Wall

HALF TIME FESTIVITIES. Ann Leyes (center), 1964 Homecoming Queen, poses at the Homecoming game with her court, Pam Craig, Jana Young, Cheryl Ashley, Marie Calentine, Carol Bickel, and Sharon Smith.

BEAUTY WINNER. Before the Homecoming pep session Fred Myers gets ready to "Color MHS Victorious" on the Art Club float, judged the prettiest parade entry.

Homecoming Float Winners

THEME WINNER. German Club members construct the "Berlin Wall" on their parade entry to create a "Smash That Red Wall" theme.

WAR PAINT. Lorrie Brockeveldt smears lipstick on Sherry Whybrew for her role on the Commercial Club float, whose theme was "Scalp Those Red Skins."

NEW LOOK. Linda Cook teases Pam Weesner's hair for Pam's role as Emma in the play. The makeup committee worked hard to change their classmates into "new persons."

"The Happiest Millionaire"

The portrayal of the wealthy but wacky Anthony J. Drexel Biddle family posed many challenges to the cast and committees of the Senior Class Play. Directed by Miss Emily Davidson, "The Happiest Millionaire" was presented on November 12th and 13th. The early-twentieth-century-Philadelphia set required an extensive search for furniture and props. Mike Chung spent many hours hunting for stuffed alligators and devising systems for their realistic operation. All cast members were measured for costumes, which were rented from a New York company or made by a local seamstress. Late rehearsals often meant ice cream cones instead of supper and eyestrain from trying to do homework in the dark auditorium.

Anthony J. Drexel Biddle (John Gall), the blustering, domineering, but kind-hearted tyrant of the colorful Biddle family, was determined to keep his only daughter Cordelia (Carole Boozer) a tomboy forever and quickly vetoed snooty Aunt Mary's (Val Brown—Debbie Thomson) suggestion that Cordy go away to Miss Applegate's school. But Mrs. Biddle (Beckie Ekamp) persisted, hoping Cordy might become a lady. All were appalled, however, when she brought home Angier Duke (Jamie McCoy), heir to a tobacco fortune, and announced their intention to marry. Many humorous incidents and a happy ending resulted as Angie tried to prove his mettle to Papa Biddle, his independence to his doting mother, and his new sense of individuality to Cordy.

LIVELY LIVERS The Biddle family was one of action. Mr. Biddle energetically leads his wife around the living room and boxes with ex-prizefighter Spike O'Malley at a dinner party. Even Mr. Duke exhibits the family vigor as he throws Cordy over his shoulder and carries her off to be married.

Top Event in November

In November while freshmen and juniors braved the punctures of the tuberculin skin tests with puckered faces and squinted eyes, sophomores took hearing tests. The newly organized Book Guild toured the Notre Dame Library, and the Y-Teens invited their mothers to their annual Recognition Tea. At a college information night college-bound students and their parents heard representatives from Indiana schools explain requirements, costs, scholarships, and courses. Parents of freshmen went through the daily schedules of their children, met teachers, and discussed problems on Freshman Parents Night.

With the Presidential election on November 3, many students campaigned vigorously, covering themselves with campaign buttons and passing out stickers and pamphlets.

After a demonstration assembly by Irv "Chief" Morgan, MHS boys became wary of judo-happy girls. Using volunteers, Mr. Morgan showed numerous defensive holds, throws, and trips, prompting us to several days of experimentation.

JUDO TACTICS. Under the direction of Irv "Chief" Morgan, Pam Robinson demonstrates a defensive grip a small girl could use.

FIELD TRIP. Members of the Book Guild pause to scan the list of benefactors to the Notre Dame Library. These students review and discuss various books. Mrs. Harriet Kamm Nye, who has written a few books of her own, is faculty sponsor.

GRIMACING. Facial expressions show feelings of fear, dismay, disgust, and alarm when freshmen get their TB skin tests.

TURKEY DINNER. Cafeteria workers serve a Thanksgiving meal to hungry students

Wintertime Packed With

CHRISTMAS PARTY. This blindfolded Spanish Club member beats at a pinata.

SENIOR PEANUT. Swallowing his pride, Bob Haeck pays the penalty for senior sponsor room 135, which sold the lowest number of Senior Class Play tickets.

In the cafeteria the day before Thanksgiving, we ate the traditional dinner of roast turkey and all the trimmings. After Thanksgiving vacation, which seemed much too short, we added to our already-over-crowded schedules such things as Christmas shopping, club parties, and clerking jobs. We donated to the annual SHARE project over 180 cans of fruit, vegetables, and soup, 50 pounds of potatoes, and $76.03.

During Christmas vacation we caught up on homework, shopped with our Christmas money, went to see 007 in "Goldfinger," cheered at the Holiday Tourney, and attended the Mistletoe Ball and New Year's parties. Panic-stricken the week before finals, we rushed to get in several timed writings and chemistry experiments. We labored over final exams and then relaxed at the Student Council Hootenanny. When we got our new semester schedules, we did everything in our power to maneuver counselors to put us in classes with our favorite teachers and our best friends. Supposed excuses like wanting a longer lunch hour, not wanting two study halls in a row, or wanting to get out of school early did not fool our alert counselors. Suddenly the first semester was over, and with a fresh start and renewed determination but hardly any rest, we plunged into the new term's classes and activities.

Christmas Parties, Shopping, Vespers

PEP SESSION. Standing and shouting the "Class Battle Cry," these freshmen try to out-yell the other three classes, but as usual the "mighty" seniors won.

VALENTINE'S DAY. Alltolders played Cupid by fixing and delivering carnations.

SOPHOMORE GOOF. As a penalty for giving the least money to the foreign student drive, Steve Chung pulls Chuck Gleissner around during a pep session.

Auditorium Erupts With Laughter As

THESPIAN INITIATION. One of 17 new inductees, Jodie Daffron presents her interpretation of the "Hammer Lock."

At the end of January, more seniors were inducted into Thespians in a solemn, formal ceremony and then initiated at the informal gathering which followed. Sectional time rolled around. Although we had had a very poor season, the sectional pep session did not lack enthusiasm. The visiting "Addams Family" introduced the catchy new chant, "We're gonna win." At a herpetology assembly freshmen and sophomores watched Mr. Bucky Reeves wrap snakes around his waist and neck and toy with many other strange-looking reptiles. On February 25 over 14 inches of snow blanketed Mishawaka. Thursday we perched ourselves by our radios listening hopefully for school cancellations the next day. Much to our jubilation we got a two-day snow vacation.

For their class play on March 25 and 26, the juniors presented "Pink Magic," a three-act comedy based on the novel by Margaret Lee Runbeck. In Mexico City a group of American tourists encountered many humorous situations. Three girls, Lambie Prowder (Cathy Metsch, Patsy Reed), Horty Evans (Cindy Van DeWalle), and Corney Baker (Linda Goss), plotted—sometimes against each other—to capture the hearts of Wally Grant (Chuck Schalliol), Henry Holt (Bob Pearson), and Kimball Colby (Dennis Spalazzi), "dangerous" Latin-American males. When Lambie lost her glasses, she could not see more than two feet in front of her, which caused many problems. She went horse-back riding with Wally, thinking she was with Kimball, and she thanked George Crater (Mike Van-Bruane) most graciously for a party, believing he was Mrs. Colby (Janice Johnston). Miss Emily Davidson directed the play, assisted by Fred Myers and Pam Hutson, student directors.

RESCUE. Lambie first meets Kim when he intervenes in her struggle with the guide to recover the watch given her when she quit biting her fingernails.

Juniors Try Pink Magic

HOPELESS ARTISTS. Maestro Mariano, the Mexican painting master, throws up his hands in horror at the frightful attempts of Clara and Hester Hotch, two old-fashioned spinsters, to paint a reasonable likeness of the guide.

FUZZY WORLD. In their attempts to glamorize Lambie, Horthy and Corney agree that the glasses must go, though Lambie is practically helpless without them.

WARM WEATHER. Looking toward long-anticipated outdoor activities, Ken Kobb cleans the family swimming pool, grooming it for summer fun.

Spring Brings Sunshine,

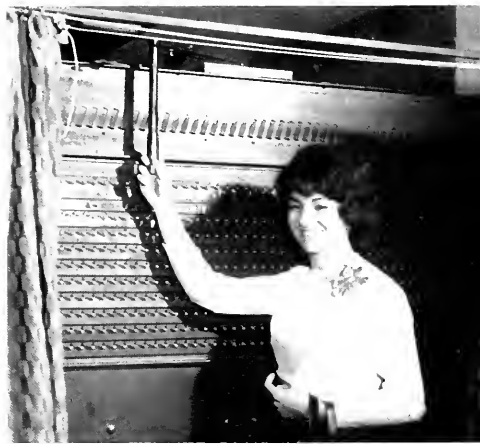

EXOTHERMIC THREE. Practicing "Chilly Winds," Doug Bowers and Mike and Steve Chung, a popular folk-singing trio, rehearse for the faculty dinner.

YOUNG LOVE. When spring arrived, steadies Gary West and Darlene Duncan found the school's courtyard a pleasant place to talk.

With the arrival of spring, we found many new things to devote our time to. We attended some of the 10 club banquets and picnics and wandered through the gym at the Miskodeed Autograph Party, gathering signatures and sentiments and admiring the new yearbooks. The Miskodeed and Alltold staffs held their annual press dinner at which the next year's staffs were named. Some juniors, deciding to run for Student Council offices, chose campaign managers and gathered their friends to paint gobs of posters and signs made on adding machine tapes reminding us to vote for them. At the Music Department's May Festival the band, orchestra, and choirs joined together in the traditional "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Cheerleader hopefuls exercised and practiced for try-outs while Y-Teen models rehearsed for their annual dessert and style show, and Thespians initiated a new group of junior members, who had taken an active part in the play.

Though we were involved in a barrage of activities, warm weather made us want to be outside, so we found many excuses to get there. We mowed lawns, cleaned swimming pools, raced motorbikes, played football and basketball, rode bicycles, went on picnics to the lake, or just relaxed in the sun.

ELECTION DAY. Marie Galentine casts her vote in the Student Council election.

Banquets, May Festival, New Miskodeed

AUTOGRAPH PARTY. Carol Booser, Sheryl Galassi, and Joe Kleiser discover that backs make good props for signing Miskodeeds.

LATIN BANQUET. Marilyn Davis feeds grapes to her master Larry Stickler.

Upperclassmen Go From

While trying to study for finals, juniors snatched hours to send invitations, find chaperones, and decorate the gym for the prom. They hoped to outdo the present seniors, who created an "Enchanted Forest" for the 1964 Prom using a false ceiling, glittering moon, wishing well, and a tree-surrounded bridge to transform the scene of basketball games and gym classes into a romantic background. We went to punch parties before the dance, and to Rocky's and the Diamond Harbor Inn afterwards, and then home for a few hours' sleep before leaving for Tower Hill the next morning for a day in the sun.

Seniors donned caps and gowns and took over the halls on May 28, their last regular day of high school. Admiring our friends' numerous accomplishments, we watched them receive the many departmental, attendance, and scholarship awards on Class Night. Virginia Long gave the valedictory address and Jane Jensen, the salutatory address. At commencement we heard Mr. Robert Shaffer, dean of students at Indiana University and graduate of MHS. The Class of '65 made retiring Principal Myers an honorary member of their class.

June 11 arrived. It seemed impossible that we had crammed all those hours of homework, club meetings, service projects, dates, games, dances, churchwork, jobs, and family activities into 275 days since the beginning of our school year.

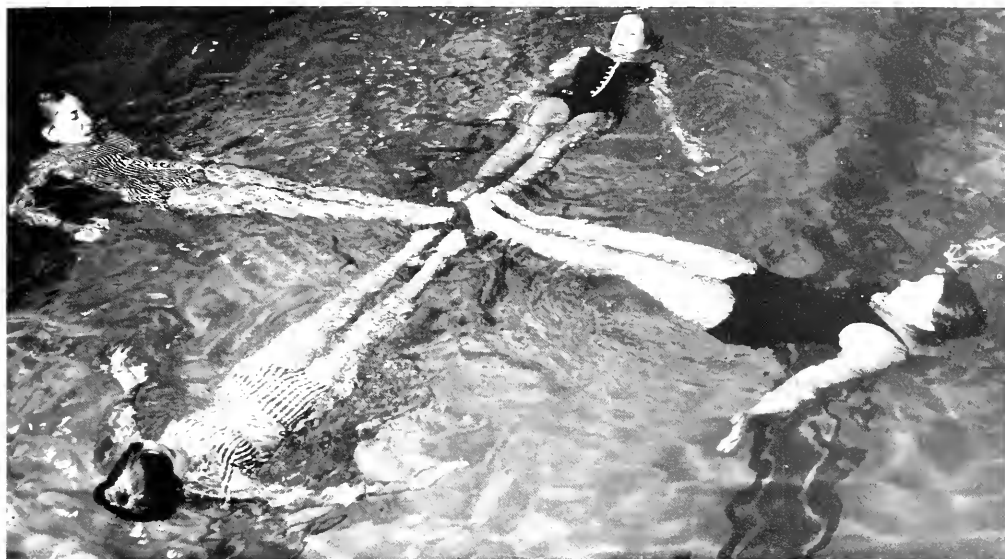

WISHING WELL. Dave Klingerman and Marie Calentine pause at the ivy-draped well in the 1964 "Enchanted Forest."

PROM DECORATING. Windy Roger Sullivan blows up the fountain pool in preparation for the 1964 Junior-Senior Prom.

Enchanted Forest to Tower Hill Sands

WATER LILIES. Several MHS girls swim weekly in a synchronized group at the Y. Performing dolphins, oysters, and tubs, they present occasional water shows.

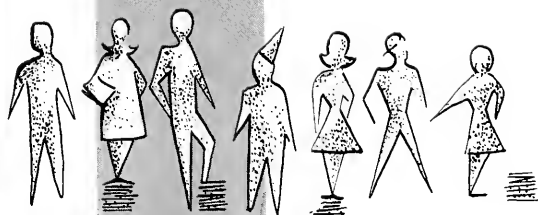

SENIOR SNAPSHOTS. "Say cheese," commands Linda Bessmer as she snaps a picture of her friend Sharon Clayborn on Cap and Gown Day.

SUMMER JOB. In her job at a supermarket, Sue Flood learned to operate a cash register.

academics

Racing to get equipment in the physics lab, pounding typewriter keys to make an acceptable timed writing, straining to keep up with the chattering voice in our language lab earphones, we kept busy.

Symbolism Mystifies Dickens' Readers;

MOCK TRIAL. In Speech II Judge Tim Walters listens as District Attorney Chuck Schalliol questions Darlene Duncan, a witness to the murder in the tower.

DISASTROUS DROP. "Oh rats!" mumbles Roger VanOrsdoll after being bombarded by his English VII vocabulary cards. "And to think I have to rearrange all 1000 of them."

PRACTICE DISCUSSION. Debate team members Dennis Laffin, Bob Bozarth, Chuck Schalliol, Chuck Whetstone, and Suzanne Veselak argue about international control of nuclear weapons, the debate topic for this year. Preparing them to debate with other students, Sponsor Douglas Hall criticizes their arguments.

Iambic Pentameter Puzzles Poetry Pupils

In the new reading lab, students took a six weeks' developmental course. After watching films which show only a few words of a story at a time and after reading essays, students took comprehension tests to see how much they had retained. To increase speed, each pupil also read novels and nonfiction books at a rate set by his pacer.

In English courses students read a variety of books from science fiction to Greek epics. Instead of making their own selections, Mrs. Lois Claus' English III classes reported on "The Martian Chronicles" by Ray Bradbury. Juniors in Miss Rebecca Kabel's classes wrote reviews of Shakespeare's plays on the back of wallpaper and drew a line to show the rising action and climax of the plot. Freshmen studied literature of all types.

Besides reading the works of others, students worked on their own compositions. While sophomores investigated subjects ranging from "The History of Domesticated Cats" to "Houdini" for their 1500-word source themes, seniors wrote term papers two to three times as long. Journalists wrote news stories, features, and editorials.

Acquiring other skills in communication, speech students prepared talks by using "cloop," a guide word composed of the first letters of choose, limit, organize, outline, and present. The debate team concluded in a practice discussion that delinquents' names should be published to discourage crime.

NEW READING LAB. Before recording her improvement in comprehension and speed, Linda Dinkledine grades one of her reading tests. To increase their reading skills, students use the pacers each day in the new developmental reading lab. In six weeks the average gain in reading speed is 138 words per minute.

LIBRARY TOUR. Learning to use the card catalogue, freshmen Connie Quier, Cheri Pullin and Tom Millemon find that books are classified by author, title, and subject.

MODERN MATH. Showing the numbers that x represents when x is equal to 2, greater than 2, or less than -2, freshman Steve Woods explains this disjunction.

Freshmen Understand Modern Algebra!

TWO-HEADED REASONING. Applied math students Betty Houghton and Sharon VanDeWalle solve a logic problem.

"And I thought $2 + 2 = 4$!" exclaimed modern algebra students. With the modular 3 system they proved that $2 + 2 = 1$. By moving clockwise around a circle numbered 0, 1, and 2 with 0 at the top, they started at zero, moved forward 2 numbers and then 2 more, and arrived at the answer 1. Although modern algebra students spent less time working problems, they understood math rules more thoroughly and had fun with numbers. To prepare herself for teaching modern math, a course new to MHS this year, Miss Mildred Harden went to a workshop at Indiana University in the summer of 1964.

Since many did not have a modern math background in junior high, they took the traditional algebra course. They learned to represent numbers with letters of the alphabet and used linear equations to solve verbal problems. Second year students solved quadratic and radical equations and performed simple math operations by using logarithms. They also worked with arithmetic and geometric progressions and the binomial theorem.

Sophomores took geometry. They studied 102 theorems and many postulates, axioms, and corollaries. Besides working problems with the Pythagorean Theorem and proportions, students practiced dividing lines into a given number of equal parts and constructed triangles when three sides were known.

Those junior and senior girls who did not take geometry took applied math to learn the fundamental concepts of modern math. Concerned with facts and not numbers, they tried to solve logic problems with deductive reasoning.

With three years' previous training, seniors took trigonometry, a course in the measurement of triangles. Later they took senior math which involves analytic geometry and calculus.

Boys interested in vocational trades took trade math. They used all types of mathematics to solve problems of the kind encountered in Mishawaka's industrial and business concerns.

New This Year: Third Year French

To learn a language better, 14 students signed up for third-year Latin and 13 for the new third-year course in French. Interested in French things like the Eiffel Tower and the philosophy of Charles De Gaulle, these French students wrote two ten-page source themes while beginners studied grammar. Latin students compiled vocabulary notebooks and read about Roman customs. Besides translating stories from Cicero and learning the Greek alphabet, Latin V pupils went with Miss Mary Hess to see Euripides' "Trojan Women," a play presented by Saint Mary's College. To enlarge their German vocabulary, students gave speeches, recited poems, and asked each other questions like "What is your name?" Student teacher Dr. Eladio Martely, formerly a lawyer in Cuba, helped Spanish linguists to get the "feel" of the language and to learn about the culture of Cuba.

FRENCH V. "An English source theme is tough," thinks Dick Pawlowski, "but one in French . . . juste ciel!"

PUSH-BUTTON CLASS. By manipulating knobs and switches, German Teacher Daniel Landis can listen to any pupil doing pronunciation drills in the language lab.

Three Teachers Try Team Teaching;

Students Interview Local Businessmen

Sharing the responsibilities of teaching 85 general business students, Teachers Martha Miller, Carole Isenbarger, and Gary Welch experimented with team teaching in Room 302 during the first semester. While one teacher lectured or led discussions on subjects like money and banking or methods of communication, the other teachers graded papers and prepared future lessons. As extra work ambitious pupils worked tougher insurance problems or interviewed local bankers about banking procedures.

To prepare for business jobs, students took bookkeeping. After learning in the first year how to record simple business transactions, advanced pupils studied partnership and corporation accounting. Taking business law, others learned the requirements of a contract and the characteristics of negotiable instruments. Besides reviewing basic grammar, business English students gave sales talks to advertise products like Fabrege perfume.

The Commercial Department offered instruction not only in business theory but also in building typing and shorthand skills. With rhythm, speed, and accuracy, second-year vocational typing students aimed at 60 words per minute while shorthand students took dictation at 120 words per minute. In office practice other commercial students transcribed letters from dictaphones and used ditto and mimeographing machines. During the first semester the class toured the offices at Wheelabrator.

DIRTY "E." Before working on letters and manuscripts, Typing I student Judy Carter brushes cleaning fluid on the keys to unclog the letters and then types on a paper towel to remove the excess fluid and dirt.

NEW ADDING MACHINES. In beginning bookkeeping Mr. Gary Welch checks the profit from the income statement that Tom Lucchi and Lee Ann Brady are computing on the new machines. The machines are small enough to use on desks.

PROBLEMS. As Richard Nix dictates the figures, Bob Fozo divides 600 by 329 on the gigantic slide rule in the physics lab.

LEAF HUNTERS. Wanting maple leaves for their collections, Dave Brown boosts Bill Coleman up the tree. In the spring biology students mounted and identified over thirty leaves found in the community.

Chemists Review Lessons

INDIRECT MEASUREMENT. In a chemistry experiment, Dale Deardorff weighs a tablet and then divides by the number of sheets to find the weight of one page.

PROGRAMED-INSTRUCTION. Chemistry student Mike Elbode learns to interpolate as he progresses from simpler to more difficult logarithm problems. To help students who do not understand a chemistry concept, Teacher Charles Karst made 63 records which rehash his classroom lectures.

by Using Programed-Instruction Records

New plywood booths built last summer gave students more privacy while they listened to programed-instruction records in chemistry. Mr. Charles Karst, who designed the booths, has made 63 records in the last five years. A student having trouble in a particular area reviews the lesson by answering simple questions based on what he already knows.

Early in the year chemistry students learned the metric system to work problems, which they solved faster by using slide rules, logarithms, or scientific notation. Studying the structure of the atom, students read, "Atoms, Crystals, and Molecules," a supplementary booklet. Before writing compounds and equations, they studied valence, the combining capacity of an atom.

Physics pupils learned how a mirror reflects light and how a person sees colors. Borrowing ice from the foods room, students did heat and vaporization experiments and got headaches watching wave patterns in the ripple tank. While studying radiation, they counted the number of times a Geiger counter clicks in five seconds because of the cosmic rays in the air.

In trade science boys on a vocational course studied both chemistry and physics. To find how far a spring will stretch when weights are added, they used a Jolly balance. A colored periodic table with valences of each element on the back helped them understand the relation of one element to the others.

Beginning with the simplest form of animal life, the protozoa, biology students classified living things into one of the eleven phyla. They dissected a frog to learn about the anatomy of mammals. In the second semester they studied "homo sapiens," or man, and learned more about the functions of their own bodies. Field trips to identify trees in the area highlighted the end of the year, and many young naturalists spent after-school hours hunting for and mounting the twenty leaves needed for their collections.

ANNELIDS. "These are the bristle-like feet on the earthworm," explains Student Teacher Sue Arndt to Dave Lewark and Dave Freet. Biology students learned that earthworms and other segmented invertebrates belong to the phylum Annelida.

HISTORY BOWL. For correct answers Tom Nocera and Rickie Kabzinski mark up points.

TAX WOES. The complexity of Form 1040 puzzles sociology students Lois Love, Mike Leszczewski, and Becky Dayhuff as they fill out trial income tax returns.

History Teachers Fight Battle of Quebec;

TIPS. For advice on getting along better at MHS, freshmen Jennifer Stebbins and Jerry Heiser look at citizenship posters.

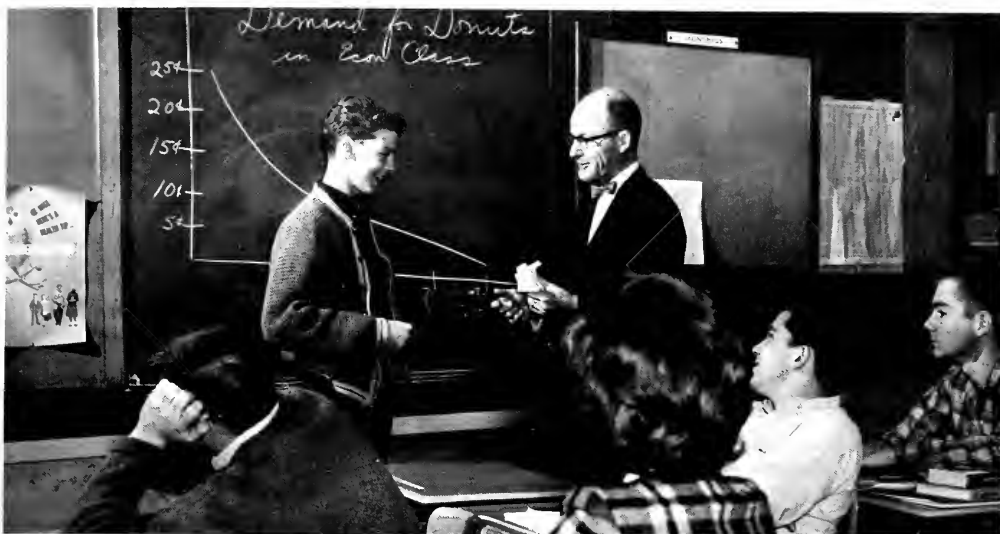

"Bang! Zing! Pow!" To show how General Wolfe and the British army climbed the cliff to capture Quebec, Mr. Merle Blue reenacted the Battle of Quebec in U. S. history. Students read about the European influence on the U. S., the fight for independence, and America's steps toward world leadership.

In government, pupils compared Congress with the state legislatures. They learned how the executive department enforces laws and how the Supreme Court practices judicial review. Citizenship classes spent their time studying about communism and the underdeveloped countries, about life in the community and at MHS, and about the opportunities high school offers.

Economics and international relations classes talked about the monetary system and foreign policy of the U. S. In economics, students learned about Federal Reserve Banks and speculated on the stock market by using an imaginary $10,000 while seniors in international relations went to the basement of the public library to hold informal discussions led by Mr. Ward Baker.

Through world history and geography other students learned about U. S. relations with other countries. They studied the evolution of man from the primitive era to the age of automation. To dramatize how wars change boundaries of countries, Mr. David Robertson slashed a map of Austria-Hungary. In sociology pupils read "How to Win Friends and Influence People," prepared budgets, planned menus and gave magazine reports.

DONUT AUCTION. Selling a donut to Bob Sheler, the only buyer at 25 cents, Economics Teacher Merle Blue proves that demand decreases as price increases.

Slice Up Hungary To Enliven Classes

MAP-PLOTTER. Locating Indianapolis, Richard Gottman places a flag on his map in citizenship as Byron Aldrich watches.

Home Ec Girls Make Prom Dresses;

MUFFIN MAKERS. As Foods I student Elinor May holds the muffin tin, lab partner Sheila Fields fills each cup two-thirds full.

Stressing the importance of a well-balanced diet, foods teachers taught students which foods are rich in nutrients. Besides making simple breakfasts and lunches, beginning pupils prepared main dishes like tuna noodle casserole. Making detailed studies of how nutrients help the body, Foods II girls planned menus and prepared their first complete dinner. Acting as hostesses for large groups, Foods III students ran a tearoom for teachers, students, and guests like Superintendent John Young. They also pickled cucumbers and made ketchup and jellies.

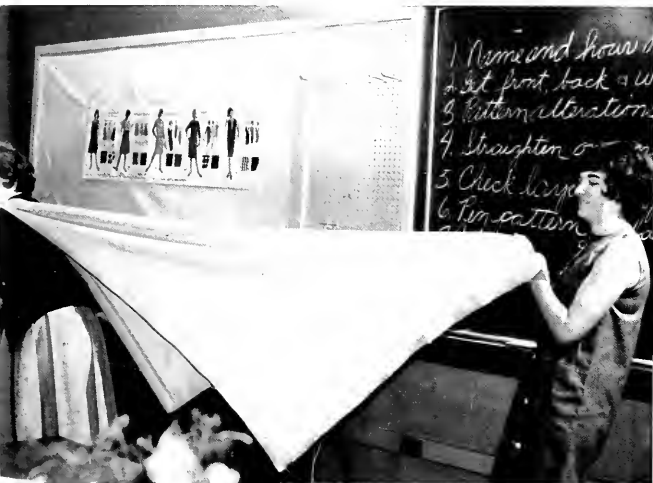

As some learned what foods a healthy body needs, other girls improved their outer appearances by discussing what clothes would complement their personalities and figures. Instead of making the traditional pair of shorts or slacks and a cotton dress, Clothing I pupils during the second semester made a house coat and pajama set. To practice sewing with wool, Clothing II classes made skirts. Budgeting their clothing allowances, some advanced students made cocktail dresses, formals, or Easter suits and coats.

Other classes studied how to take care of people and how to decorate a home. In child care the girls studied the growth of children as home nursing students learned to bathe a sick person. Besides studying how to furnish a home, home management pupils worked on projects like making curtains.

TEA ROOM. Glenda Jones and Mary Cluggish set the table while other Foods III girls prepare a three-course meal to be served to teachers and students.

Entertain Teachers in Foods Tearoom

TUG-OF-WAR. Before laying out the pattern, Clothing I students Randi Baker and Sharon Sohlike stretch material on the bias to make the threads straight.

FOODS I CANNERS. Mrs. Marilyn Egisti shows Linda Miller, Gloria Codinez, Julie Siri, and Earnestine Hibble how to slice a pineapple before canning it.

TAILOR-MADE. Completing her first Clothing I project, Kathy Klotz marks with pins the alterations in her slacks.

With Colorful Artwork, Melodic Music,

LEATHER TOOLING. With mallet in hand, Barb Wells in Art VIII tools a purse.

GILDED LADY. Polishing her statue, Sue Barrick views the project with pride. She made it from wire, plaster, and burlap.

"THE BOOR." Refusing to pay her late husband's debt, dramatics student Brenda Gawthorpe orders servant Eddie Echols to oust John Barker (left), the boor.

Art, music, and dramatics students entertained others.

Before working on plays by well-known authors, beginning actors learned to control the quality, pitch, volume, and rate of their voices. They babbled like babies to relax their jaws and pantomimed to improve body movements and facial expressions. Since stages were once slanted toward the house, dramatics students had to remember that upstage was away from the audience. The dramatics program, the climax of the semester course, was not presented in an assembly this year; instead, the class planned a skit for the May Thespian induction.

Since colorful artwork is pleasing, Art I, a study of color and design, is the basic art course. Practicing what they had learned, these students designed such projects as a student directory cover. Expressing their innermost thoughts, more advanced students painted abstracts. Others intending to study art in college worked in the fields in which they planned to specialize. To form a basis for judging their own work and others, art history pupils studied painting, architecture, and sculptures dating from ancient times to the present.

To improve their talents, many students who could play the piano auditioned to take organ lessons from Miss Frances Koch. They learned to pedal with both feet while playing on two key-boards. Adjusting the stops to change the tones, the musicians found that an organ can sound like any instrument from bells to a Hawaiian guitar to a clarinet.

Exciting Drama, Students Please Others

SOMETHING NEW. Practicing for the Christmas Vespers, freshman Tammy Reed, the orchestra's first harpist, plays "Sleep, My Jesus, Sleep." With Joyce McCay, pianist, and Darlene Duncan, cellist, she accompanied Virginia Long, vocalist.

THREE VIEWS. Don Sabbe sketches an orthographic projection in Drafting I.

MASS PRODUCTION. To promote efficiency in the print shop, Bill Cochran and Mark Sirok assemble the pages of PTA booklets as Ed Jors staples them.

Safety Inspector Plan

To learn skills used in industry, boys took vocational trade courses. Besides making tools in machine shop, students learned shop safety rules. Advanced draftsmen studied mechanical or architectural drafting. Participating in a co-op program, a few boys taking drafting and machine shop worked during part of the school day at small industrial concerns. In wood shop students used and cared for woodworking machines and constructed tables and cabinets. Printers ran the paper cutter, made the plates for the offset press, and printed over 31,900 Alltolds a year. Working in the lab, electric shop boys applied impedance units to circuits which oppose changes in voltage and current. They also worked with transistors and repaired appliances, radios, and other electrical devices.

Exploring the different trades, other boys took industrial art courses. In machine shop they operated lathes, grinders, and shapers. While Drafting I students made floor plans of houses, others made freehand sketches, pictorial drawings, and auxiliary views. Beginning printers studied the history of printing and type design. They also had some practice in working the bindery equipment like the stitcher and folder. After tracing the flow of electricity from the power plant to the house, electric shop students worked on five house wiring projects and identified every part of the superheterodyne radio, the common household type. To learn the names and uses of hand tools and to repair appliances and fixtures, 20 girls took home mechanics.

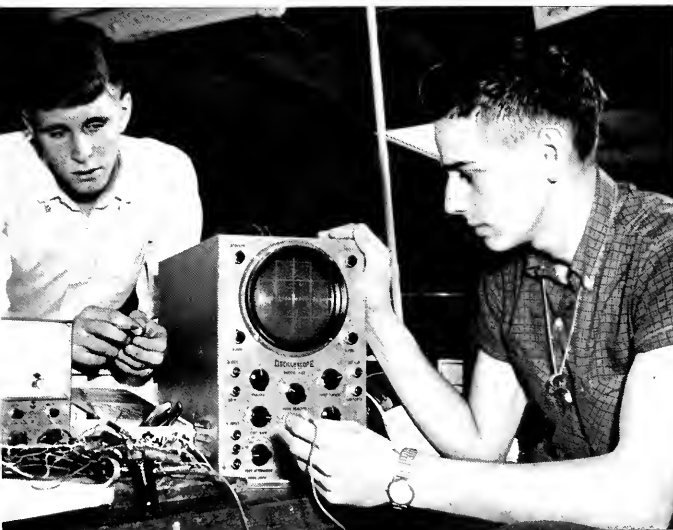

WOOD WORKER. In Vocational Woodshop II Tom Smith smooths his bookcase frame with sandpaper. Other boys built tables and lamps to use at home.

INSPECTION TIME. Foreman Tom Pauwels examines Randy DeCraene's 1-2-3 block.

Patterned After Industrial Programs

OSCILLOSCOPE OPERATORS. To show the effects of the defective components of a short in a radio circuit, electric shop students Jim Fox and Jim Mahler set up this laboratory experiment on an audio amplifier circuit.

SHOP BOY. Vocational machine shop student Bob DeRoeck operates a vertical milling machine in making a sine bar.

Check-ups, Push-ups, and

In a rigorous physical fitness program, gym students ran ten laps around the gym, wrestled for twenty minutes, or did thirty-push-ups. Instructor Robert Heck taught a special gym class for boys who were especially interested in conditioning their muscles. The boys ran outside in all kinds of weather and participated in indoor competition games like wheelbarrow racing. Besides doing calisthenics, other students worked muscle against muscle in isometric exercises or muscle against solid objects in isotonic exercises.

Even the girls tried to avoid flabbiness. When the weather permitted, they played tennis at Merrifield Park and golf in the practice field back of the stadium.

Besides taking gym, some students signed up for other related courses. In the spring 45 girls and 31 boys, the smallest group ever to enroll in dance class, fox-trotted to current tunes like "Red Roses for a Blue Lady" and waltzed to "Moon River." To learn to swim, others rushed to and from the YMCA. Health students studied mental health, basic anatomy, and heredity and gave 15 minute speeches on topics from penicillin to the effects of smoking.

After reaching 15½, many students took driver training. Besides learning basic safety procedures and rules of the road, they practiced changing tires, backing up, and parallel parking.

BEEP BEEP. To detect hearing defects, School Nurse Gladys Conant administers tests to sophomores in the library. Students indicate if they can hear the beeps transmitted at different frequencies.

"WATCH THE NOSE!" Health student Jim Hans prepares to "revive" Hardy Stebbins by mouth-to-mouth respiration in a demonstration of first aid.

Jump-ups Keep Teens Physically Fit

FIRST TIME ON ICE. Practicing winter driving in Merrifield Park, driver training student Kea Rea creeps along to avoid skidding.

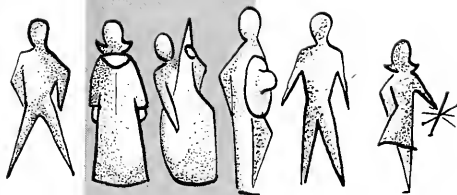

NOT AS GOOD AS ROBIN HOOD. Hopeful that the next try will hit the bull's-eye, Judy Mooneyham and Jenny Naugher twist arrows from the target.

HIGH HOPES. Exercise and fun mix for Pat McDougal as she bounces on the trampoline.

activities

Dashing from house to house to work on Homecoming floats, madly marching in the hot sun or chilly wind to perfect a band routine, folding stacks and stacks of Alltolds for Friday delivery, we kept busy.

In Crowded 219 Miskoeditors Find

In a small and often disorderly 219, 17 Miskodeeditors rushed to meet engraving, printing, picture, and subscription deadlines. When 219 became too crowded, editors gathered copy, layouts, pictures, and typewriters and headed for 216 or remote corners of 245.

While covering the story of the year at MHS, editors performed many different tasks. When underclass pictures were returned in October, underclass editors sorted, alphabetized, and identified 1500 packages of pictures. Besides mounting 468 pictures, senior editors verified each senior's extracurricular activities. In order to write accurate copy, the academic editors learned a few rules of modern algebra and the names of unfamiliar shop equipment. The sports editor struggled to write colorful copy about losing teams; the activities editors, about inactive clubs. The student life editor, armed with strob packs and camera, appeared at almost all big and little social events. The art editor, besides designing the cover and entire layout, spent over 30 hours cutting the intricate sketches on sheets of acetate and created the chartreuse and pink polka-dotted posters for the spring subscription drive.

The business staff launched the fall subscription drive with a man-on-the-street skit. Handling the finances, the staff took in over $7,000 to pay for the book. Advised by Miss Martha Miller, the 1965 staff created the largest and most costly Miskodeed of the 54 yearbooks that have been published at MHS.

SUBSCRIPTION DRIVE. Circulation Manager Rudy Schwartz hangs a banner announcing the fall yearbook sale. During the fall drive 1235 Miskodeeds were sold.

Togetherness Unavoidable

INFANT'S WEAR. Sports Editor Joe Amaral, the youngest Miskodeeditor, chuckles at the gag gift which the staff gave him at his seventeenth birthday party.

CHAOS. Cropping pictures amid typical 219 confusion, Academic Editor Edith Ruthrauff struggles to meet her engraving deadline.

Alltolders Interview

Goldwater, Chad Mitchell

TIME OUT. Stealing a few minutes from proof-reading Alltold copy, Sue Henderson shares a joke with staff member Sue Flood.

A plane landed at the South Bend airport, and two Alltold reporters rushed onto the field to greet Barry Goldwater. At the Morris Civic Auditorium, Alltolder Sandi Macri pushed backstage to interview the Chad Mitchell Trio. Throughout the year journalists interviewed civic leaders, teachers, and students. Head photographer Jim Powell snapped many of the pictures with a new telescopic lens.

Unlike other area high schools, Mishawaka prints its own newspaper. The Alltold copy goes to a commercial typesetter early in the week. On Thursday two pages go to press in the MHS print shop, and on Friday, the remaining two.

One of the hardest tasks for the Alltold staff was proof-reading galleys. When report cards were issued, staff members checked the spelling of as many as 300 honor roll names. To meet the deadlines, news editors' articles were due a week before the paper went to press. As a result, staff members often wrote stories about scheduled events which had not actually occurred.

Besides publishing a weekly newspaper, the Alltold compiled a student directory. Selling for 50¢, it listed the names, sponsor rooms, addresses, birthdays, and phone numbers of all MHS students. Alltold advisor Mrs. Lois Claus increased the staff this year by adding a managing editor and a news editor. After seven years here, Mrs. Claus will teach next year in South Bend.

Three Clubs Serve

3355 Hours a Year

High School Red Cross membership was open to all Mishawaka High School students, but room representatives were the most active members. With the help of sponsor Miss Rebecca Kabel, the representatives collected examples of homework and candid pictures for a scrapbook which they sent overseas.

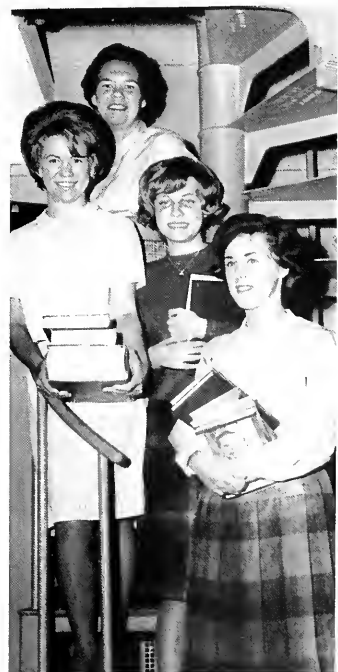

The 12 ushers took tickets, handed out programs, and seated people who came to class plays, concerts, and Vespers.

Formerly known as the Junior Librarians, members changed their name to the Hoosier Student Librarians. Besides helping sponsor Mrs. Helen Teeters in the library, members sold maroon derbys and booster pins before the basketball sectional to earn money. They used their profits to send Mary Ann Hoogland to the workshop for student library assistants at Indiana University and to donate $20 to the foreign student fund. The club also donated money to the Mishawaka Children's Museum. For fun they initiated new members at a Halloween party and exchanged goofy gifts at Christmas.

RED CROSS. High School representative Mary Hunter displays a scrapbook which the organization sent overseas. The scrapbook contained themes, book reports, poems, and candid pictures of MHS student life.

LIBRARIANS. Secretary Miller, President Jasiewicz, Treasurer Bottorff, and Vice-President Cook carry books from balcony.

Messages, Stage Lights, and Muskets

HISTORY CLUB. Vice-President Schott, Secretary Galassi, Sergeant-at-arms Schrader (seated), Treasurer VanOrsdoll, President Bowers, and Chaplain Stickler (standing), examine a Revolutionary War musket.

Sponsored by Miss Helen Stoddart, 126 students gave up their study halls to serve as hall guides. Each hour during the day, hall guides delivered call slips from the counselors' office, ran errands for teachers, and directed visitors and lost freshmen. The Hall Guides had a pizza party in the school cafeteria.

The stage crew, under the direction of Mr. Howard Currier, was busiest during the weeks of the senior and the junior class plays. The 12 members constructed backdrops, painted scenery, moved props, and operated the lights. On other occasions they set up risers or manipulated the curtains. Members also managed the public address system at awards banquets, auditorium assemblies, pep sessions, and at football and basketball games. While members served the school, they also earned 1/2 credit in stagecraft toward graduation.

Winning the prize for the most original float in the Homecoming parade, the History Club used the theme "Sink the Redskins." The float contained two dead Indians in a leaking canoe. Sponsored by Mr. David Robertson, the 40-member club planned to end the year with a spring party.

"Youth in Government" was a new project for Hi-Y members this year. Delegates from northern Indiana attended a district meeting at Manchester College in January to nominate candidates for governor and lieutenant governor. At the start of spring vacation, the same delegates traveled to the Indianapolis State House for the state-wide "Youth in Government" program. With suggestions from Lieutenant-Governor Robert Rock and House Speaker Richard Bodine, the delegates staged a mock legislature at a three-day session to learn how the state legislature operates.

For their annual project the Hi-Y joined the Y-Teens in the SHARE service project which raised enough money to fill baskets for 16 needy families. As another Christmas project, Hi-Y members delivered the Christmas cards which students deposited in the Hi-Y mailbox. To encourage students to buy TB seals, the club required that each card have four seals.

For fun club members often swam at the Mishawaka Family Y and danced with their best girls at the annual Swingheart Sway put on by the county Hi-Y groups at the Indiana Club in March. Mr. Walter Johnson is head sponsor of the Hi-Y.

AMUSEMENT. Waiting for the Coronation Ball to begin, John Lang, Dick LeMon, and Phil Barnett exchange a few jokes. Hi-Y officers escorted the queen and her attendants.

CHRISTMAS GLITTER. With suggestions from Lynn Felt (right), Debbie Thomson hangs tinsel on the Y-Teen tree.

SKIT. "You're here to help us?" Susan (Cathy Metsch, right) asks Aunt Louise (Janice Kohler) in "Christmas for Cinderella," given at the Christmas party by junior Y-Teens. In the skit three orphans received wishes from their aunt.

Help Y-Teens Promote World Fellowship

Bewildered freshmen wandered into the cafeteria on September 17 for the first Y-Teen activity of the year, the Get-Acquainted Party. In October all members attended a picnic in the cafeteria. In November members invited their mothers to the solemn Recognition Service and Tea.

During the holiday season Y-Teens hung the greens at the South Bend YWCA and trimmed the two Christmas trees which the Hi-Y purchased for the main hall. Joining with the Hi-Y for the annual Share project, members collected enough canned foods, potatoes, and money to fill Christmas baskets for 16 needy families. At the Christmas party Y-Teens presented a silver tray to Mrs. Bettie Wingerter who served as teenage director of St. Joseph County Y-Teens for six years.

February was crowded with activities. Gathering in the all-purpose room at the Mishawaka Family YMCA, girls were introduced to the Penn, Riley, and Mishawaka exchange students who spoke and showed slides on Thailand, Turkey, and Guatemala. Representatives attended the Mid-Winter Conference in Gary. Using a new design, the club constructed pompons to sell before the basketball sectional.

Before spring vacation Y-Teens and Hi-Y held the impressive Pre-Easter Service. On April 23 girls danced with their favorite dates at the county Starlight Fantasy.

Y-Teens ended the year in May by entertaining their mothers at a style show and dessert. Sponsor Mary Dunn awarded a bracelet to President Mary Ann Watt for outstanding service.

POTLUCK. At the sophomore-junior potluck held at the Mishawaka Family YMCA in January, Y-Teen members brought enough food to fill three tables. After eating dinner and listening to a speaker, members swam for two hours in the Y pool. The freshmen and seniors held their potluck and swim in November.

NEW FRIEND. At the Get-Acquainted party in the fall, freshman Y-Teens met AFS student Miriam Lily Fernandez. Wearing a Mayan Indian costume, Lily told the girls about her native country, Guatemala.

Council Holds Hootenanny;

"Invest in Our Student" was a familiar sound around MHS when the Student Council launched this year's Foreign Student Drive. Representatives stopped students and teachers in the halls and asked basketball fans at the Washington game to contribute to the drive. In sponsor rooms the juniors won the class contest by contributing $105; the seniors were next with $78. With donations from school and civic organizations, the Council exceeded its $800 goal by more than $200.

Using the theme "Moonlight Masquerade" for the Coronation Ball, members of the social committee decorated the gym with a haunted house and a harvest moon. As a replacement for the Mid-Semesters Dance, the Council held a hootenanny which 532 students attended.

Besides sponsoring the Homecoming parade and two bus trips to away games, the Student Council held a panel discussion on school spirit. To arouse interest in the faculty-student basketball game, each of the 65 representatives brought a poster to the March meeting.

Following the spring campaigns and election, the representatives attended a banquet to install new officers and to honor old officers, their parents, and regular members.

CAMPAIGNS. Imitating a Country Cornflakes commercial, Mike Ryno and Valerie Brown campaign for vice-presidential candidate Debbie Kintner in April 1964.

Exceeds Goal in Foreign Student Drive

$5.25, $5.50, $6.25. Student council representative Jodie Daffron counts the AFS money collected in sponsor rooms. The goal was $800.

ARRANGEMENTS. Social Chairman Garry Schalliol confers with Student Council Sponsor Lynetta Wilson about the decorations and the band for the Coronation Ball.

SATURNALIA. Following an ancient Roman custom, toga-clad members exchange candles.

LATIN CLUB. Sergeant-at-arms Schulte, Vice-President C. Davis, President M. Davis, Secretary Flood, and Treasurer Metsch inspect Saturnalia decorations.

Community Ambassador Tells Linguists

SATELLITES CAESARI. Caesar's helpers Debby VanDerVoort and Becky Smith glue green crepe paper leaves on chicken wire to finish the Latin Club's Homecoming float.

The Spanish Club learned about Spain and other Spanish-speaking countries at their meetings. They heard about Mrs. Harriet Nye's summer in Mexico and Sponsor June Johnston's trip to Spain. Exchange student Miriam Lily Fernandez told members about Guatemala. At their annual Christmas party they broke a pinata which was shaped like the head of a Spanish gentleman. In the spring the club picnicked at Merrifield Park.

The German Club communicated with Mishawaka's sister-city, Soest, Germany. Using "Down the Red (skin) Wall," the club constructed a float that won the Homecoming prize for the most appropriate theme. Sponsored by Mr. Daniel Landis, the club had a Christmas party and planned to eat at the Hans Haus, a German restaurant in South Bend.

The French Club, Les Miserables, sponsored by Mr. John Badry, held occasional meetings and a Christmas party.

The 100-member Latin Club built a float for Homecoming and munched popcorn while viewing movies of Rome. At one of their meetings they saw Jane Jensen's colored slides of her summer in Germany as an exchange student. The toga-clad members exchanged candles and danced the Roman twist at the December Saturnalia. Notes written in Latin invited members to the spring banquet to celebrate the anniversary of the founding of Rome. At the banquet Argonauts received service pins and feasted on a meal served by freshman "slaves."

In January the Latin Club hosted a joint meeting of all language clubs. Community Ambassador Barbara Bixel spoke and showed slides of her experiences last summer in Nigeria.

GERMAN OFFICERS. Vice-President Gleissner, President Lang, Treasurer Knoblock, and Secretary Stscherban examine German souvenirs.

of Experiences in Nigeria

SPANISH OFFICERS. Vice-President Jean Nelson, Treasurer Terry Pastorino, President Carol Wagner, and Secretary Priscilla Spencer learn the steps of the hat dance around a sombrero. Advisor June Johnston bought the hat in Mexico.

FRENCH OFFICERS. Secretary Cathy Mitchell, President Lynn Felt (seated), Treasurer Gary Harmon, and Vice-President Debbie Thomson translate articles from "Les Realities," a French magazine.

HOME EC CLUB. Treasurer Barbara Dayhuff, Secretary Phyllis Boyd, Vice-President Pam Karnes, and President Becky Dayhuff use styrofoam balls to construct Christmas tree ornaments. Club members also packaged mistletoe to sell before the holidays.

Home Ec Members Find Taffy Pull a Sticky Affair

Pop, pop, pop! came the sounds from the home economics wing when the Home Ec Club gathered to make some 375 popcorn balls in 90 minutes. Even though members ate a good deal of the popcorn, they managed to make a profit on the many balls they sold the following day during lunch and after school. Pulling taffy and packaging mistletoe, members not only had fun but also added money to the treasury by selling what they made. With the profits the club purchased 100 punch cups for the school's punch bowl set and a lace tablecloth for the home economics department.

For the Homecoming float members borrowed flower pots, chairs, blankets, a desk, globe, and a flag from the home ec department and recruited the officers as Indians to "Teach those Redskins." Prior to the start of the parade, a big wind threatened to wreck the float.

At Thanksgiving the girls donated $15 to fill a basket for a needy Mishawaka family; for a Christmas project the girls worked three months making dresses for patients at the Children's Hospital in South Bend. At the January meeting Mrs. Kay Cave, owner of Kay's Knit Shop, demonstrated the principles of knitting sweaters and mohair dresses.

In February the club discussed the possibility of taking a spring trip to Pokagon State Park, to Kellogg's of Battle Creek, or to a glass and furniture factory. Members ended the year by honoring their mothers and the new officers at the spring banquet.

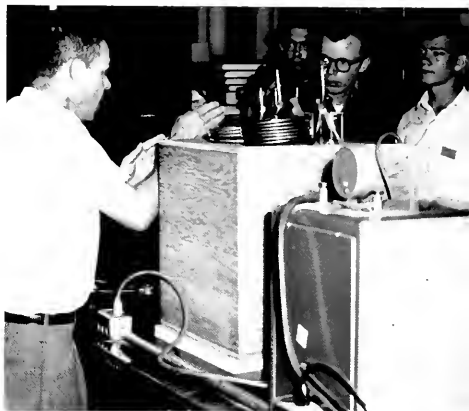

STICKY FINGERS. Mari Lancaster reaches for a handful of freshly popped corn to roll into a popcorn ball. The following day members sold about 375 popcorn balls.

Nurses, Scientists Entertain Clubs

As football fans pushed into the Notre Dame stadium for the UCLA game, White Caps volunteers stood outside the gates collecting money for the Tuberculosis League. The eleven volunteers not only received more than $40 in donations, but some of them were also offered tickets to the game from generous strangers.

At various meetings registered nurses told White Caps about careers in both psychiatric and industrial nursing and in obstetrics; other professional people spoke about pharmacy and about physical and occupational therapy. As a Christmas project club members donated gifts to patients in Children's Hospital. In March the club attended open house at Memorial Hospital School of Nursing. In April members inducted newly elected officers at a tea honoring Mrs. Frank Walerko, who served as the White Caps medical auxiliary sponsor for 13 years.

The biology, chemistry, and physics sections of the Science Club combined for three meetings. Members invited teachers and junior and senior high school students to one of the joint meetings to hear Adams High School senior Greg Mueller explain the heart-lung machine he constructed for the Science Fair and the value of participating in the fair. At the other two meetings club members saw a movie on erosion and listened to a lecture on ball bearings given by Mr. William Rimbeay from Dodge. Mr. Charles Karst and Mr. James Braunsdorf sponsored the club.

BALL BAND TOUR. Before demonstrating the use of an infrared spectrometer, Mr. Mike Moore, a chemist in the physical testing department, explains the structure of the equipment. Science Club members toured the Ball Band laboratories in May 1964. (Picture by Mike Jackson, Ball Band).

WHITE CAPS. Former President Sally Loos (center) presents Mayor Prickett's proclamation declaring a Future Nurses Day to 1964-65 officers: Junior-Senior Secretary-Treasurer Sharon VanDeWalle, Vice-President Sue Ann Fagan, President Janet Wever, and Freshman-Sophomore Secretary-Treasurer Barbara Holcombe.

SCIENCE CLUB. A Geiger counter can detect radioactivity even through metal shielding. President Jim Hillaert demonstrates this to Vice-President Chicci, Secretary Jensen, and Sergeant-at-arms Kreiter.

Commercial Club Purchases Selectric Typewriter

Organized for both social and educational purposes, the Commercial Club boasted a membership of 200 future secretaries and businessmen. In October the club initiated new members by making them perform such stunts as biting into apples dangling on strings, or swallowing a glass of water while hula-hooping.

In November Mr. Harold Berger spoke on job opportunities in the FBI field and listed the stiff qualifications for obtaining positions. In December Dave Tydgat played Santa Claus at their Christmas party by delivering goofy gifts to members. At the Valentine party members ran relays, rushing 15 yards in oversized shoes to pick up toothpicks with garden gloves. For a service and money-making project, club members worked in the concession booths at all home basketball games, dividing profits with Y-Teens.

At the spring banquet 36 members received pins for winning the typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping contests in which all commercial students participated. Head Sponsor Ruth Foulke announced the new officers, and a representative from Ball Band awarded the Ball Band trophy to the outstanding commercial senior.

The Commercial Club gave the department an IBM Selectric electric typewriter, purchased with funds collected during the past three years. Because the typewriter is equipped with a removable type element, a typist may use one of several different types. Club members who used the machine found that they typed 50 per cent faster than on a regular typewriter.

BLOWING BUBBLES. During the Commercial Club Christmas party, Sherry Whybrew tries her bubble pipe, a gag gift which she received from another club member.

COMMERCIAL CLUB OFFICERS. President Becky Bauwens points out an error in the club minutes for Secretary Marilyn Brazell while Vice-President Maureen Canfield and Treasurer Lorrie Brockeveldt check the budget before submitting it to the Board of Control. Miss Ruth Foulke is the sponsor.

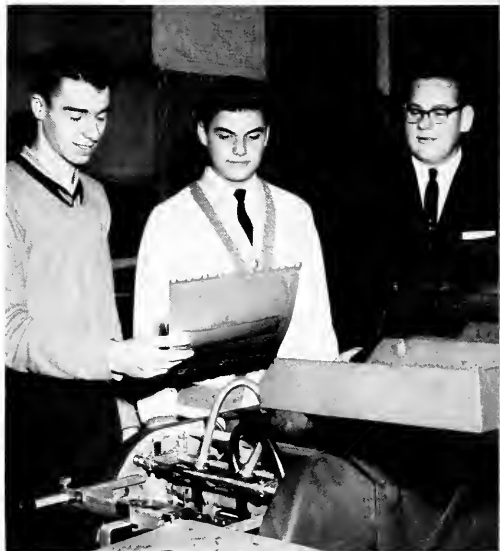

FTA OFFICERS. Future teachers try cadet teaching at Beiger, Bingham, and Battell schools to learn the grade level at which they would like to teach. President Karen Sprouse, Secretary Kea Rea, Scribe Peggy Freise, Vice-President Janet Fox, and Treasurer Debby VanDerVoort leave for their daily cadet teaching assignments.

FTA 20 Years Old; Craftsmen Only 1

The oldest and one of the most active groups in Indiana, the MHS chapter of the Future Teachers of America was founded in 1945. Five years later the club named the chapter after Miss Hannah Lindahl, former supervisor of elementary education, who started the cadet teaching program. Throughout its 20 years of existence, the FTA has given cadet teachers an opportunity to serve the school system and to have fun while deciding if teaching should be their career. Besides roasting hotdogs and inducting new members at a fall picnic at Castle Manor, FTA members honored MHS teachers by serving them coffee on Dear Teachers Day in March. The highlight of the February meeting was Miriam Lily Fernandez' talk on education in Guatemala. At the spring banquet the Future Teachers installed newly-elected officers, recognized senior members, and celebrated the club's 20th birthday. Mr. Ward Baker spoke at the banquet and showed slides of his recent tour of Europe. Sponsor Rae Stoll presented pins to the 43 members who had definitely decided on teaching as a profession. Mrs. Stoll stated that she awarded more pins this year than in all the previous years combined.

The former Engineering Club was reactivated this year under the new name of the Craftsmen's Club. Under the supervision of shop teachers Mr. Kenneth Armel, Mr. Howard Currier, Mr. Milton Ross, Mr. Robert Mammolenti, and Mr. Robert Warring, the boys met twice a month in the print, machine, electric, or wood shops to work individually on their class projects or on outside projects. Mr. Armel was head sponsor of the 42-member club.

CRAFTSMEN. President John Strombeck shows an offset plate to Treasurer David Cerri and Vice-President Greg VanderHeyden in Sponsor Kenneth Armel's print shop.

Artists Portray People

BACKSTAGE. Preceding the Senior Class Play, Martha Mead applies makeup to Pete VanHaver while Sherri Galassi whitens his hair with shoe polish.

"Double, double, toil and trouble; Fire burn, and caldron bubble," a Thespian member quoted from "Macbeth" when his name was called. At each of the monthly meetings, the 38 members answered roll call with a quote from a play. To gain membership in the honorary society, dramatics-minded students had to earn a minimum of ten points which they received by taking dramatics, by assisting in dramatics assemblies, or by participating on stage or behind the scenes in class plays.

During the year Troupe 496 conducted two impressive inductions. Following the candle-lighting ceremonies, new inductees performed stunts thought up by old members. Giving their interpretations of humorous situations, Ken Kobb and Pam Weesner played two alligators madly in love while Pat Rauch tried to nonchalantly remove a tennis ball which had lodged in the armpit of a hypothetical handsome guy on the next court. At the February meeting Bob Johnson, who studied at the Chicago Goodman Theater, talked about the theater-in-round and suggested colleges which have good speech and theater departments.

Miss Emily Davidson chose and sponsored the Thespians, who elected Jim McCoy, president; Valerie Brown, vice-president; Linda Hutson, secretary; and Jim Hillaert, treasurer.

Using Grease Paint or Oil Paint

Dressed in a smock and beret, Fred Myers sat atop the Art Club float holding a huge palette and using a giant-size paint brush to "Color the Cavemen Victorious." The colorful float, which members created by stuffing napkins into chicken wire, won the Student Council prize for beauty.

Sponsored by Miss Rosa Weikel, the Art Club visited the oil painting exhibit at the South Bend Art Association and the Regional Scholastic Art Awards show at Robertson's Department Store. Tom Hibschan won several Keys and two of five Hallmarks, the highest awards given at the regional show, for his paintings "The Doors" and "The Press," while Jim Powell won awards for photography, and Fred Myers won awards for his paintings. To raise money, artists sold 66 Christmas corsages.

"No Time for Freshmen," a one-act play written by Blackfriar Linda Goss, entertained club members at the fall picnic. At another meeting amateur dramatists presented the play "White Phantom." When in a humorous mood, members played charades; when in a serious mood, they gave dramatic readings. At the O'Laughlin Auditorium the five officers saw the Greek tragedy "Trojan Women," staged by students from Saint Mary's College and from Notre Dame. Assisted by Sponsor Catherine Caranasios, Blackfriars practiced stage movements and lines at each meeting in preparation for the three-act play they produced in May.

To raise money, Blackfriars sold baked goods at Shopper's Fair, making a profit of more than $20. Club members elected Sally Flatt, president; Patsy Reed, vice-president; Kathie Balmer, secretary; Pat O'Connell, treasurer; and Bob Pearson, sergeant-at-arms.

THE LONG LOOK. As other hems went up, choir robe hems stayed down. Becky Brady checks a robe length for Pat Norton.

While most students slept late on October 22, the 64 A Cappella Choir members rose early to open the morning session of the North Central Teachers Association by presenting a program at Central High School. In preparation for the evening concert, the MHS choir practiced in the afternoon at Adams with 650 vocalists from 18 high schools.

The Christmas season was a busy one for the choir. They sang carols as living pictures were unfolded at two Vesper services for the public on Sunday, December 13, and at a freshman-sophomore assembly on Monday. Before vacation senior members caroled in the halls, ending their singing in front of the principal's office with "Silent Night."

At the start of the new year, the choir concentrated on music for the Pre-Easter Service and for the May Festival. For the PTA Founders Day program in February, the choir sang "It's Nobody's Business" and selections from "Carousel."

Instead of the annual candy sale, the choir and glee clubs held a magazine subscription drive in March. Profits from the drive paid for new music and award sweaters.

Bethel College asked the choir to give a concert at the college in April. The group ended the year by participating in Baccalaureate and Commencement ceremonies. Officers for the year were Mike Chung, president; Mary Ann Watt, vice-president; Linda Siri, secretary; and Garry Schalliol, treasurer.

The audience waited in anticipation as the 135-member North Central Orchestra, led by Concertmistress Mary Ann Watt of Mishawaka High School, walked onto the floor. On the morning of the concert, Mary Ann earned in tryouts the honor of being concertmistress. Eighteen other Mishawaka instrumentalists appeared with the orchestra at the North Central Teachers Association meeting in October.

During the year orchestra members participated in trios and in the theater orchestra. Trios played for dinners and meetings in the school and the community while the theater orchestra performed both before and during intermissions of the Junior and Senior Class Plays.

On December 4 the 65 members of the concert orchestra presented the Winter Concert. The concert featured senior soloists Joyce McCay on the piano, Larry Stickler as vocalist, and Wayne Reinholtz on the baritone horn. Under the direction of Miss Madolin Hackett, the MHS orchestra played in the Spring Orchestra Festival in April.

Music Honor Society's 28 members, chosen by audition, performed in community events when asked. Fulfilling the society's purpose, members shared their talents at a new members' and an old members', and a senior concert. They climaxed their year with the traditional Stage Fright Concert.

ADDED ATTRACTION. Twin drum majors Ted and Fred Kreiter practice synchronized strutting. For the first time the marching band was led by two drum majors.

On Thursday evenings in early fall, 88 musicians, 2 drum majors, 14 pompon girls, 2 twirlers, and 6 majorettes assembled on the football field to practice "Ranks in Reverse" and other precision marches for half-time ceremonies at all home games and at the Adams and LaPorte games. In addition to half-time ceremonies, the band marched in the Memorial Day, Homecoming, and United Nations Day parades under the direction of juniors Ted and Fred Kreiter.

At the end of the football season, marching members tried out for chairs in the concert band. At the Winter Concert in January, musicians fought the Battle of Jericho with "Joshua." The Spring Concert in April featured senior soloists. In May the band joined the orchestra and choral groups to present the May Festival.

Director Walter Bowers selected competent instrumentalists to form a dance band and a pep band. The pep band added life to pep rallies and to home basketball games, while the dance band, composed of two girls and thirteen boys, presented a repertoire of swing music at the Winter Concert. For competition in local and state contests, musicians also formed small ensembles.

From November 20 to December 7, band members competed for "top salesman" honor in the annual candy sale. With hard work and enthusiasm the members sold $700 worth of candy bars.

"How to TP Artistically," "I Was Infatuated by Gobbledygook," and "How to Eradicate Type Lice" were a few of the humorous, original essays which newly chosen members read after the formal candlelighting ceremony at the Quill and Scroll initiation in March. Besides sponsoring an April bus trip to the press day at Valparaiso University, the Leila B. Heimbach chapter of Quill and Scroll staged the Press Dinner in March. Using the theme "A Tale of Two Staffs," Miskoeditors and Alltolders performed skits which told the story of each staff. Mr. Mike May, account executive at WSBT television station, spoke on broadcasting. Sponsors Martha Miller and Lois Claus announced the positions on the 1966 Miskodeed and Alltold staffs. To finance activities, Quill and Scroll members sold plastic cover protectors for Miskodeeds at the Autograph Party. Officers were Kathy Ramsey, president; Susan Flood, vice-president; and Jim McCoy, secretary-treasurer.

Twice a year the auditorium was hushed as the National Honor Society president called the names of the new members at the formal induction ceremonies. Following the induction, proud parents congratulated new inductees at a punch and cookie reception in the gym lobby. National Honor Society members tutored students requesting help in any subject. Students are judged for membership in the Society on the basis of character, service, leadership, and scholarship.

Composed of students and teachers, the Board of Control met once a month to study and to approve or reject clubs' budgets. Faculty members of the Board were appointed by Principal Myers. Student members were elected by their classmates.

VICTORIOUS NETTERS. Mike Chung leaps high to return a volley against Fort Wayne North while Tom Shelby hastens to cover.

"It matters not whether you won or lost, but how you played the game," might have been applied to recent tennis teams. This year, however, the Cavemen not only played the game heartily but won more matches than in three previous seasons combined, gathering more victories (5) than in the 1960 (0), 1962 (1), and 1963 (3) seasons together. Paced by seniors Tom Shelby and Mike Chung, the Maroons beat their first four opponents. The win streak included the first victory over Fort Wayne North in five years and an impressive 6-1 win over Riley. Faltering at mid-season, the squad regained its early form only once when it trounced Penn, 6-1.

The ball bounced the wrong way for Coach Russell Arndt's Cavemen in "overtime play." Twice during the year Tom Shelby was defeated in marathon sets as he lost to a Michigan City netter, 14-16, and to a LaPorte player, 12-14.

Cavemen Clobber

Central and Penn

Once again Coach Tom Rice's harriers sparkled as individuals but on most occasions failed to jell as a team. In two important meets, however, the Cavemen completely overwhelmed the opposition. With six men running the Eberhart course in under eleven minutes, the Maroons clobbered the Central Bears, 19-38. Two minutes later the Cavemen decisively defeated the Penn Kingsmen, 19-40.

With many of their teammates out of action at one time or another, the burden of carrying the squad fell to co-captains Don Copp, recipient of the Burgess Award, and George Marzotto.

Mishawaka Slips by North

Between narrow victories at the beginning and the close of the season, the Maroons, in most games, buried themselves under an avalanche of penalties, fumbles, and mistakes. Penalties repeatedly nullified touchdowns which would have meant victory, and fumbles stopped important scoring drives.

Opening the season, the Gary Horace Mann Horsemen rode into Tupper Field to play the Cavemen. Sparked by the passing of Denny Baldwin and the running of all-conference back Glenn Nelson, the Heckmen scored three times in the final two periods to defeat the visitors, 19-14.

Leading in every statistic but the score, the Cavemen pushed the Central Bears all over the field. Central, however, scored on an early Mishawaka punting miscue and held on to win by a touchdown, 7-0. During the game the Maroons had three touchdowns called back because of penalties. The following week Riley, turning numerous Maroon mistakes into quick scores, blasted the Cavemen, 40-6.

Six new faces started for the Cavemen against the Adams Eagles as Coach Bob Heck juggled his lineup in an attempt to find the winning combination. Inspired by junior Lance Grover's passing, the squad shocked the Eagles, 29-14. Guard Dennis Hays scored the Maroon's last touchdown by picking up an Adams fumble and rumbling for a quick six.

The Cavemen lost to Coach Bob Heck's alma mater, Washington, as penalties nullified two touchdowns which would have tied the score. The West-Siders scored twice in the first period to send the Cavemen down to their third straight conference defeat.

Defeated but not demoralized, the Maroons traveled to Kiwanis Field, LaPorte, to oppose the Slicers. The aroused Cavemen battled valiantly but lost the contest, 26-6.

B-Team Wins 3 out of 9

After fumbling numerous times in the opening minutes against third-ranked Elkhart, the Cavemen played a rugged contest. The Blazers, however, scored first on an early pass and raced to a 21-0 win. Elkhart was only one of several teams ranked in the top ten that the Cavemen faced.

Led by vicious line blockers and outstanding runners, the Cavemen spoiled Michigan City's homecoming. The Red Devils scored first as they marched from deep in their own territory after intercepting a Maroon pass. Scoring in the final period, the Cavemen squad roared back to win their first conference game.

For the second time in as many seasons, the Cavemen were victorious on Homecoming night. Driving early, the gridders scored twice in the first period to spurt to a 14-0 lead over Fort Wayne North. Inspired goal line stands by the Maroon defense insured the win since the Cavemen could not score after the first quarter because of the bruising North defense.

Howe Travels Downstate;

New Head Coach Dale Rems and his assistant Al Smith guided the grapplers through an unpredictable season of lopsided scores and close calls in which heavyweight John Howe proved to be especially tough in the clutch.

After struggling for the first half of the season, a heartbreaking loss to Culver was sandwiched between narrow victories over Washington and Riley. Against Washington with the Maroons losing by a point going into the final match, Howe decisioned his opponent to win the meet, 20-18. Following the 20-19 loss to Culver, Howe was again the hero in the Cavemen's 24-20 upset of Riley. With his team again trailing entering the final match, big John pinned Riley's Mike Swanson. The squad's best showing of the year was against Michigan City when only Byron Aldrich's draw stopped the Cavemen from whitewashing the hapless Red Devils.

Following a third-place finish in the Penn Invitational and a fourth place in the conference, the Maroons' hope for a high finish in the sectional failed to materialize. Only Howe, upsetting Clay's unbeaten Jeff Parker, won a sectional title. Advancing past the Lafayette regional, Howe went to the state meet where he captured the Cavemen's only points by placing fourth.

GOING FOR THE BUCKET. Elmer Leiter drives along the base line and breaks into the clear to score a basket for the Maroons.

"What can I say? We lacked experience and height; illness and injuries got the best of us. We just never knew who to count on," commented Coach Bob Smith as he summed up the disappointing 1964-65 season.

Hampered by Denny Baldwin's broken wrist which required five cast changes, Dennis Decker's broken collarbone, Larry Klaer's appendicitis attack, and Ken Deitchley's chronically sprained ankle, the "walking wounded" slumped to their second-worst season in history, extended their conference losing streak to seventeen games, and became the continual cellar dwellers of the Northern Indiana Conference. Inexperience hurt the Cavemen severely as sixty per cent of the starting lineup in November lacked any appreciable varsity experience.

The Maroons began the season with a victory over Coach Smith's wife's alma mater, Plymouth. Larry Klaer scored 24 points and Chuck Brennan pumped in 22 to pace the cagers. The squad broke a two-game losing streak as Elmer Leiter scored a career high of 24 points to lead the Cavemen to a 78-58 thumping of an out-manned Portage Township team.

After a four-game drought Christmas vacation brought a welcome relief from competition to the Maroons. In the Holiday Tourney they showed considerable improvement by avenging an earlier loss to St. Joe before Adams defeated them in the final game. So, for the second year, the Maroons were runner-up.

Injury-Prone Cavemen

The new year failed to usher in any change in the fortunes of the Cavemen as they won only one game. Although Coach Smith repeatedly juggled his lineup, he couldn't come up with a combination that would jell consistently, but he did give valuable experience to underclassmen.

The squad began the second half of the campaign just as they ended the first half with a loss to Adams. The trip to the Michigan City game almost caused a shortage in the coaching staff. Coach Dale Stroud arrived at the Mishawaka gym just in time to see the team bus's taillights fade around the corner. Starting five minutes later than the team, Driver Training Instructor Stroud still managed to beat the team to Michigan City by fifteen minutes.

Riding on the strength of Denny Baldwin's 18-point performance, the cagers bombed Gary Lew Wallace, 67-58, to snap a four-game losing streak and win their only game of 1965. Going into the sectional with a five-game losing streak, the Maroons felt that they had no place to go but up. However, the Central Bears ended the team's hopes of finishing the season with a big upset as the South Benders dropped the Cavemen, 61-48.

Some members of the team collected post-season laurels. At the Kiwanis Club banquet, where the team heard former Head Coach John Longfellow, Larry Klaer received the free-throw award while Tom Poynter received the most valuable player trophy.

CHARGING GUARD. Shooting into the open, Dennis Decker tears for the basket and an easy cripple shot. Dennis sat out part of the season with a broken collarbone.

RECORD-BREAKING TANKERS. Surrounded by his team, Coach Walter Ross congratulates them after the win over Central.

The inexperienced sophomores who helped form Coach Walter Ross's original "chickens of the sea" three years ago matured into the seasoned-senior backbone of the swimming team which broke every team record but one, posted the best season showing in the short history of swimming, and won the Penn Invitational.

The Barnett brothers, Phil and Larry, paced the record-breaking assault as each broke two individual freestyle marks. Larry smashed both the 200 and 400-yard standards while Phil set new records in the 50 and 100-yard events. In sectional competition Bob Aguirre stroked to a new record in the 200-yard individual medley. Although he broke the state meet record by 1/10 sec., Bob placed third and failed to repeat as medley champion. Tom Heintzberger finished sixth in the 100-yard butterfly.

In winning the Penn Invitational, the team collected three relay trophies, one individual trophy, and the championship trophy.

Slipping and sliding around the Eberhart-Petro course on many wet spring days, Coach Vic Wukovits' underclass-dominated golf team gained valuable experience. Midway in the season the linksmen lost their number one player and captain, Ron Cleland, when he was declared ineligible by the IHSAA for participating in a non-sanctioned tournament. After the loss of Cleland, the squad was left with only one senior, Ray Ganser.

Although the team averaged fewer strokes per man on their home course than they averaged on their opponents' courses, they won only one match at Eberhart while losing four. Ganser led the team in scoring as he fired an average of 81.3 strokes per competitive round.

The team's difficulties began early in the season as the golfers dropped their first triangular match, losing to Michigan City and Riley. They rebounded, however, with consecutive conquests over Central and Goshen. Although they lost their next four matches, the team, paced by Cleland's 70, rallied to split with Riley and Michigan City.

Blasting a sensational hole-in-one, Tim Torian highlighted the Maroon's surprising seventh-place sectional finish.

BEATING THE HAZARD. Bob Wukovits belts his drive across the St. Joseph River during the Central match. Bob was consistently among the top scorers.

Speed, Spirit Spark '64 Diamondmen

BALL ONE. Mike Cecchi, the Cavemen's capable receiver, pulls down a high fast ball thrown by a Maroon hurler during the game with Greene. The Maroons beat Greene, 7-2.

Described by new Head Coach Don Portolese as "a team that never gave up," the Cavemen rallied in the late innings of many games to win them: against Penn the Maroons scored the winning runs with two out in the seventh; against Washington the Cavemen scored five runs in the seventh for a win; against Central the team rallied for six runs in the final two frames to down the Bears. The season's record also pointed up the squad's hustling spirit. Although the Cavemen had a 1-5 record at one point in the season, they won seven of the remaining games to finish the year, 8-9.

Taking the field on many a wintry spring day that sent reserves as well as spectators scurrying to the warmth of nearby cars, the Cavemen defeated every South Bend school at least once. The weather didn't affect the Maroon baserunners because the team stole 52 bases in 60 attempts. However, the cold weather did affect the team's batting average and fielding play as the Cavemen hit only .230 and committed an average of three errors per contest.

Sparkled by the pitching of seniors Jim Sili and Dennis Wood, the Maroons breezed past Greene in the first round of the Twin-City Tournament, but St. Joe stopped the Cavemen in their bid for a second consecutive championship. Five returning lettermen, who gained added experience by playing American Legion ball in the summer, formed the nucleus of the 1965 team. Using these boys, Coach Portolese tried to instill in the Cavemen the same spirit that characterized last year's team.

Tornado Stops School, but Not Thinlies;

INSTRUCTION. Coach Tom Rice briefs his charges prior to the Penn meet. The thinlies responded by thoroughly trouncing the hapless Kingsmen visitors by a score of 82-27.

"Whatta season!" moaned Coach Tom Rice. Battered by the elements and a near tornado and bewildered by quirks and oddities, the thinlies won four, lost six, and tied one. A tornado warning sent the Niles school children home early, but it failed to stop the track meet. In a downpour that made the pole vaulters' hands so slippery that only Mishawaka's Denny Smith and Walt Zemialkowski cleared the first height, the Cavemen pounded the Vikings, 69-39. Against St. Joe the Maroons were thwarted. Although they won eight of thirteen first places and scored forty first-place points, the team lost the meet, 49-60. In the Adams meet the Cavemen accomplished the impossible. They tied the Eagles, 54-54. Officials disallowed a third place Adams finish so that the total number of points was reduced from 109 to 108, thus making a tie possible.

When given a chance to perform under normal conditions, the thinlies delivered some outstanding individual performances. Twice during the season Walt Zemialkowski broke one of the school's oldest records, formerly held by Assistant Coach Milt Ross. Competing against a St. Joe pole vaulter, Walt jumped 12 feet $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches to top the old mark by $\frac{3}{4}$ inch. Opposing Penn one week later, Walt broke his newly-established record by leaping 12 feet $7\frac{1}{4}$ inches. Chuck LeMon broke another record by running the 180-yard low hurdles in 19.7 seconds.

ZEMIALKOWSKI ZOOMS. Soaring over the bar, Walt Zemialkowski breaks the school pole vault record. Assistant Coach Milt Ross formerly held this record.

M-Men Sell Programs to Buy Awards

BIG APPETITES. Frank Wilson, Dave Anderson, and Tom Rice "put away" the food at the lettermen's banquet in the spring.

"Hey, kid, you wanna buy a program? You can't tell the players without a program." This cry echoed at every football game as the M-Men sold programs. The money raised from this activity was spent for the purchase of the Ralph Burgess Awards and for other projects in the school.

Many service clubs and other groups in the area honored and entertained the members of several MHS teams. The Kiwanis Club hosted the basketball team and presented the free throw award to Larry Klaer for making the highest percentage of his free throws in active competition, while the Alumni Association gave the most valuable player award to Tom Poynter. The guest speaker at the dinner was former Cavemen head coach and now Athletic Director at Indiana State, John Longfellow.

Hugh Devore, former head football coach at Notre Dame, spoke at the football banquet sponsored by the Lions Club. The club presented a trophy to the most valuable player, Dave Falkenau. At the awards assembly in January, the Exchange Club awarded Dennis Hays the most valuable lineman trophy.

In May the track and cross country lettermen swam, rode horses, and relaxed as guests of the Rotary Club at Tabor Farms.

SCOREKEEPERS. Annette DeBroka, Gloria Godinez, and Jerri Meribela check the scores of the volleyball games during the GAA's annual tournament. Mishawaka's GAA teams finished first, second, and seventh.

"Wrestling? No, we're not going to do any wrestling," quipped Mrs. Louise Gould, now in her fourth year as gym instructor and GAA sponsor when a GAA member suggested the activity. However, wrestling was about the only sport in which Mishawaka's girl athletes didn't participate. The girls played volleyball, speedball, badminton, and for the first time, baseball. They also somersaulted and tumbled through exercises on both the trampoline and the mat.

Not all GAA activities were confined to the Mishawaka gym. Often the girls traveled to area schools for volleyball games and other sports events; some spent a weekend at a camp where they learned canoeing, archery, and tennis.

For the second successive year the GAA sponsored intramural tournaments in volleyball, badminton, table tennis, and bowling for the freshmen and sophomores. Sue Barrick ran the badminton events, and Judy Fields headed the volleyball competition, while other members served as referees and officials. During the badminton play Ray Nausbaum, the fourth-ranking badminton player in the United States, played an exhibition match for the girls. Highlighting the year, Mishawaka's GAA volleyball teams finished first, second, and seventh in the annual area GAA tourney held for the second time at Mishawaka. For participation in activities, the girls received awards based on a point system. These progressed from numerals to letters to bracelets, which the girls received instead of the wall plaque that was formerly the highest award.

Mishawaka Loses an Excellent Educator

MR. MHS. Principal Russell R. Myers is retiring this spring after 26 years as administrator of MHS. He has been highly respected and admired throughout his career for his scholarly ability, fair judgment, and sincere dedication and has gained a state-wide reputation for his work in education.

As Principal Russell R. Myers Retires

Principal Russell R. Myers, who retired in June of 1965, began his teaching career in a one-room school at the age of 17 and since then has worked in six different schools in Indiana. In 1939 he resigned as principal of East Chicago Roosevelt High School to come to MHS. Intervals of service in both world wars and several years of college interrupted his work as a teacher and principal. He served in the Army for a short time in World War I, and for three years as Lieutenant Commander he directed a naval gunnery school in World War II. He received his first teacher training at Central Normal College and was graduated from Indiana University magna cum laude and a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Later he earned an MA in secondary education at the University of Chicago.

Mr. Myers is interested in many things. An avid reader, he is well informed about current and professional matters, making him an interesting conversationalist. Concerned about community affairs, he is active in the Red Cross, the Lions, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Methodist Church. In his retirement he plans to travel around the nation with his wife, read all of the books he has been wanting to read, and possibly even write a book of his own on Indiana folklore.

Throughout the years students, teachers, and parents have gone to him for scholarly advice. His influence, however, has extended beyond Mishawaka. He served for two terms and was a member-at-large on the North Central Secondary School Commission, which has the final judgment on accrediting all of the high schools in 19 states.

Mr. Robert H. Shaffer, dean of students at Indiana University and the 1965 Commencement speaker, says of Mr. Myers, "Because of his leadership, Mishawaka High School enjoys a high rank among all high schools, and as its graduate I take pride in his accomplishments, and as a professional colleague I respect and admire the contributions he has made to education."

AT HOME. On the rare nights when no social, cultural, or athletic events are scheduled at the high school, Mrs. Ruth Myers and her husband occasionally play bridge. Married for 45 years, they have two children and five grandchildren.

A MAN OF MANY HOBBIES. Until he sold his farm, (top picture) Mr. Myers spent much of his time caring for its gardens and livestock. He is also a zealous reader.

Fine Reputation Reflects Years of Work

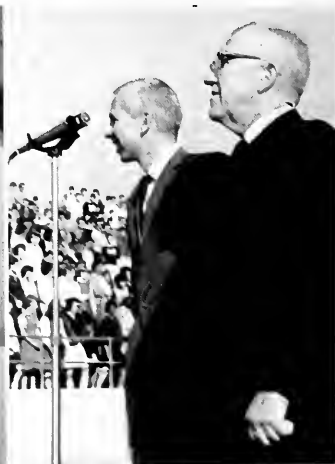

BUSINESSMEN. Dr. Young and Mr. Myers discuss the increased cost of new equipment.

Expecting the best from students and faculty and demanding the best from himself, Principal Russell R. Myers made MHS what it is today. Studying college requirements and community vocational needs, he planned a curriculum that was well-fitted to the educational needs of Mishawaka. To keep the program up-to-date, Mr. Myers supervised the addition of new courses and the improvement of old ones, developed an excellent guidance program, and periodically required teachers to revise educational philosophies and courses of study. To help administrate a large school, Mr. Myers established advisory groups soon after he came to MHS. The Faculty Cabinet deals primarily with matters of the curriculum, the standing committees with special problems, and the Student Council with student interests. Utilizing the advice of these groups, he developed a smooth-running organization and a curriculum so complex that it would take a student nearly 20 years to complete all the courses.

Mr. Myers also found solutions to the many problems of managing a large school. For example, when the enrollment increased in 1947, he devised the split schedule to use school space more efficiently. He was the first principal at MHS to encourage students to take extra enrichment courses in summer school.

Standing as lasting tributes to Mr. Myers' excellent administration are the building of three major additions to the high school; a 26-year record of top ratings by the North Central Association; and the excellent record of successful graduates.

Superintendent Young Goes to Washington

For the first time in 16 years, the Board of Trustees has a new president. Dr. J. Robert Davis replaced Mr. Fred Hums as the presiding member of the board. Perhaps the most important of Mr. Hums' many contributions to the schools of Mishawaka during his 25-year term was his great influence in establishing the cumulative building fund, allowing the school city to build without borrowing and thus saving the interest charges, and avoiding the necessity of selling school bonds.

Always contending with the problem of building and updating Mishawaka schools, the board is now considering constructing vocational shops for semi-skilled trades above the present MHS shop area. Superintendent of Schools John J. Young has been a member of the state committee to devise a program to provide more training in semi-skilled jobs, a plan to train lower-ability students for a vocation. In January Dr. Young and two other Indiana educators went to Washington, D.C. to present the Indiana plan to representatives of the Office of Education.

This year the school system purchased a new bookkeeping machine. Since Mishawaka was among the first schools in the state to use machines for efficient accounting, many of the accounting forms that are now state-recommended originated in Mishawaka. In another experiment involving machines, the personal data of high school students were fed into computers at the Bendix aviation plant. If the process proves useful, computers may be used later to compile report cards and schedule students classes.

TOP MAN. Superintendent John J. Young supervises the Mishawaka school system.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES—Mrs. LaVerne V. Speiser, Mr. Fredric H. Craven, secretary; Dr. J. Robert Davis, president; Mr. Oscar Elbode, treasurer; and Mr. Delmar W. Anderson. The presidency of the board changed hands for the first time in 16 years as Dr. Davis replaced Mr. Fred Hums. Mr. Anderson is a new member.

For the class of '68 the year was new and exciting. They made new friends, joined their own sections of the Hi-Y and Y-Teens, watched their freshman football team compile a 7-2 record, and went to parties and dances.

Although the opening of the Marian High School reduced the size of their class, freshmen still occupied 21 sponsor rooms. Most of these rooms and many of their classes were in the new east wing, sometimes called "the freshman wing."

Those freshmen on a college prep course learned a foreign language for the first time and reasoned out problems in modern algebra. Others made career books in citizenship to study job opportunities and requirements. In English classes freshmen read stories from many lands, with a special emphasis placed on Dickens' "David Copperfield." Boys puzzled over isometric drawings in drafting, and the girls learned how to set in sleeves and prepare meals in their home ec classes.

By spring the freshmen, who had come to MHS from three junior high schools and four parochial schools, had been molded together into a proud, unified class.

BUT NOT IN SHAME. Freshmen do read books right side up. John Armit and Dennis Cramer ham it up for picture.

The class of '67 was no longer at the bottom of the heap. They joined new clubs to take an active part in school activities and found that their services were appreciated—especially when it came to clean-ups after meetings. Sports-minded boys participated in B-team sports, while the girls played volleyball and badminton in GAA.

Sophomores enjoyed additional privileges. Some parents allowed more dating and extended evening hours until curfew. Many sophomores turned sixteen and applied for drivers' licenses. Girls discovered that there were two kinds of sophomore boys: those who liked girls and those who had not yet discovered them. Girls with steadies carried tooth brushes in their oversized purses to fluff up their angora-covered rings.

The eleven sophomore sponsor rooms contributed the least amount of money in the foreign student drive. As a humorous punishment Steve Chung pulled junior Chuck Gleissner around the gym in a little red wagon at an assembly. The numerous experiences of sophomores were a part of growing up. As the largest class at MHS, they enjoyed their year together.

Returning to school in the fall, the Class of '66 found that they were now upperclassmen and entitled to such privileges as gym seats, lockers, and sponsor rooms on the first floor.

Juniors discovered that they had to work harder because overcrowded colleges require higher grades for entrance. They pondered over the hidden meanings in "Macbeth" and "Idylls of the King" and expressed their own ideas in their philosophies. Conscientious students spent long hours on chemistry experiments and advanced algebra. Many students crammed at the last minute in hopes of a good score and possible recognition on their National Merit tests.

Outside of the classroom the juniors campaigned for their favorite Student Council candidates by making posters and distributing badges. Displaying artistic talents, juniors interpreted characters for their play and cluttered garages with prom decorations. During National Honor Society induction surprised juniors proudly signed their names in the registration book. Students jammed the stuffy Rose Ballroom for post-game dances to jolt to the Jerk. It was a hectic but enjoyable year.

Largest Graduating Class Glad and Sad

STATUS SYMBOLS. Mr. C. R. Armstrong from the Terryberry Company distributes class rings to seniors Ann John and Ed Reith.

OFFICERS. The Class of '65 elected Treasurer Rita Weinkauf, Secretary Jane Jensen, President Jim Davis, and Vice-President Dave Anderson. This year's officers decided to raise play-ticket prices to make the play more profitable.

Dividing their time between studies and extracurricular activities, the 470 seniors had fun, worked hard, and gathered honors. During the first hectic week of the school year, they learned who had done what during the summer, became accustomed to new schedules, and remarked at the small size of the freshmen. They contributed much time to the class play, "The Happiest Millionaire," sometimes staying as late as 11:00 p.m. for rehearsals. During the Friday performance of the three-act comedy, a bomb scare compelled Assistant Principal Walter Johnson to ask the audience to leave the auditorium while a search was made. Despite the hoax, the cast completed the production.

With English source themes completed, seniors gratefully welcomed Christmas vacation. Over the holidays many seniors attended Yuletide parties, danced at the Mistletoe Ball, and earned extra spending money by clerking in local stores during the holiday rush. After vacation 14 mid-term students finished their high school careers while others celebrated the completion of final exams at the Student Council hootenanny.

As Their Busiest Year Ends in June

Second semester schedules were crowded with dates, homework, more source themes, and preparations for the future. Those going to college wrote admission and housing applications, talked to Principal R. R. Myers about local scholarships, took college entrance examinations, and worked after school to help earn money for their education.

To meet requirements, commercial students typed 50 words a minute or took dictation at 120 words a minute for five minutes. They and shop students read want ads and met with personnel directors in hopes of finding a job. Other boys planned to go into the armed services after graduation.

Seniors ordered caps and gowns and graduation invitations. On Cap and Gown Day they took final examinations, exchanged name cards, and left early for a two-week vacation. Seniors welcomed this relaxation before the flurry of end-of-semester activities. They danced at the Prom as guests of the juniors, basked in the sun at Tower Hill, and attended Class Night, Baccalaureate, and Commencement Exercises. As seniors left for the last time, they all agreed that their last year was the busiest they had spent at MHS.

MIRROR, MIRROR ON THE DOOR. Lynn Felt finds that modern hairdos are not created to be worn with mortarboards.

CASTING. Trying out for the senior play are Karen Greene and Jim Hillaert. In the production Jim played the butler, while Karen served on a committee. Miss Emily Davidson, director of the play, tries to choose the most able performers. She conducts tryouts for several days to carefully select the casts.

ENCHANTED FOREST. Couples admire the 1964 Prom decorations and discuss plans for the traditional Tower Hill beach parties the following day at Lake Michigan.

Parties and Pranks Enliven Existence of Seventeen Staffers

"Cut it—Martha's coming!" was a frequent cry of our unofficial 219 lookouts as we seventeen Miskoeditors artfully combined rubber band shoots, "mock" matches, bull sessions, and parties with the seriousness of meeting deadlines for the 1965 Miskodeed. During regular Miskodeed hours we often yakked about source theme grades, the merits of the coaching staff, and the best way to slam the Alltold, frazzling the nerves of our adviser, Miss Martha Miller.

Our staff had its share of colorful personalities. Joe "Alliteration Al" had an uncanny tendency to write everything imaginable in alliterated style. Lauding the "Cavemen's consecutive conquests" and the "malicious mangling by the Maroon matmen," Joe not only started an infectious alliteration epidemic which spread to the entire staff but also kept a little book recording his own classic examples. Ron conjured up the most fantastic excuses for not getting his work done on time. Gare consistently appeared wearing suits covered with mysterious mohair that coincidentally matched the colors of Jean's sweaters.

Seventeen birthday parties, complete with cakes (often cut with scissors when someone forgot a knife) and little white plastic forks which soon became encrusted with an interesting array of frosting colors, highlighted our eating efforts. Expeditions regularly went to Cline's for phosphates and Fritos, and a National Honor reception committee provided a whole box of left-over cookies which we promptly chugged in six minutes flat.

Although we did have our lighter moments, Miskodeed was far from being a fun-time activity. Involved in our work was a grave responsibility to the entire school to present an accurate and interesting story of the year. The seemingly endless after-school hours, the always-breaking camera, and headlines and copy that just wouldn't fit were only a few of our headaches. But our efforts were worth it. We all learned a great deal about writing or business managing, about budgeting our time, and about learning to cooperate with sixteen other individuals, all necessary to produce the best Miskodeed possible. We have tried and now can only hope that you the reader will like our "pea-green" book.

Acknowledgments

The creation of a Miskodeed is quite a complex business. There are many "behind-the-scenes" people whom we would like to thank for helping us with the book: Mr. Larry Wells of the Associates Engraving Company, who assisted us in planning our layout and answered innumerable questions; Mr. Jack Bundy and the S. K. Smith Company, who combined our cover ideas into a workable design; Mr. Edward Andros and Mr. Russell Chubb, who took many of our pictures and developed all of our film; and the Messrs. Toms and George Graessle and the Graessle-Mercer Company of Seymour, Indiana, who printed our book.

Within the school, besides all of the students and faculty who served as our subject matter, we especially appreciate the assistance of Miss Rosa Weikel, who advised us on the cover and art work; Mr. Kenneth Armel, who helped us make appropriate type selections; Mr. Howard Currier and the stage crew, who set up backgrounds for activities pictures; the English and sponsor room teachers, who assisted with under-class pictures; Miss Thelma Martin, who advised us on grammar problems; Mr. Don Portolese and his drafting class, who drew blueprints for picture panels; the many teachers who patiently answered questions about their subjects and activities; and Student Council members, who helped with the subscription drives in their sponsor rooms. We extend a big "Thank-you" to all of you. Without your concerned efforts, the 1965 Miskodeed would not have been possible.
